Interesting Facts

- Forecasting the future isn't easy. In 1943, aviation writer Harry Bruno predicted the decline of the automobile after WWII. "Instead of a car in every garage there will be a helicopter."
- In 1946, Twentieth Century Fox movie executive Darryl Zanuck predicted TV wouldn't last six months after its introduction. He said, "People will get tired of staring at a plywood box every night."
- The word "robot" was introduced in 1920 by Czech playwright Karel Capek from the Czech word for forced labor. In his play, robots turn on their human owners and take over the world.
